The day after the Motion for Judgment by Default was made an order denying the motion was made by the Court. Based on the information, there may have been another procedural step missing that was not known about because of it logically not being obvious and it actually being redundant, but that was the only additional aspect seen as not present. This was a notice to the clerk that a Default was being filed along with an affidavit when I consider the filing of the Motion itself along with an affidavit as the notice to the clerk too that there was the Judgment by Default to file.

I worked more on the Motion and the additional document if needed. Now I have to question a little further to determine what next has to be done.

A copy of the denying order follows.
