

08-26-2026 AI Summary of Reflections of Myself Dealt With so I Can Represent Others, 08/18/2026

Let me see what the main ideas in the document are.

This document is a personal and professional reflection by Joseph Mallon, focusing on his journey to secure proper credentials and recognition to represent others professionally, particularly in law, insurance, and finance. Key points include:

1. Professional Credentials and Authority

- The author emphasizes the necessity of having adequate credentials and official recognition to represent others, especially when compensation is involved.
- He describes ongoing efforts to secure these credentials, citing a federal law case (26-cv-02712, filed in 2026) aimed at rectifying past deficiencies in recognition and credentialing.

2. Barriers and Delays

- Mallon details significant delays and lack of acknowledgment from institutions and authorities, which have hindered his ability to work professionally and represent others.
- He notes that despite earning a doctorate in business in 2012 and completing post-doctoral work in 2019, he has not received due recognition or benefits.

3. Legal Actions and Advocacy

- The author has taken legal steps, including filing an SF-95 form and subsequently a federal lawsuit, to address the lack of response from authorities and to secure his professional standing.
- He has acted pro se (representing himself) in these legal matters, aiming to establish the authority needed for broader representation.

4. Aspirations for Law Credentials and Compensation

- Mallon seeks law degrees (J.D., LL.M., S.J.D.) from Harvard Law School as compensation for decades of unrecognized work and missed opportunities.

- He connects his personal journey to broader societal and historical contexts, including significant legal and educational events.

5. Ambitions for National Leadership

- The document concludes with the author's expectation to be recognized at the highest level, aspiring to exclusive rights to the U.S. Presidency by 2029, based on his unique legal and professional circumstances.

Overall, the document outlines a persistent effort to resolve longstanding credentialing issues, achieve professional recognition, and ultimately represent others at the highest levels of authority.
