

Harvard Law School Graduate Program,

I had three email addresses for Harvard Law School. The following response is what I received from the gpquery@law.harvard.edu email address. I will not currently send another message there. I am still questioning concerning the other two email addresses I also sent relevant communication to recently: deansoffice@law.harvard.edu and jdadmiss@law.harvard.edu .

I request that my letters be looked over and that the unique project I described be seriously considered for Harvard Law School taking it on to contribute to the situation and advancing it because of the extraordinary circumstances involved. If you here at Harvard Law School intend to do anything constructive in this direction, I request word back so that I know where the situation stands. If you do not communicate back to me, I will consider you are not doing anything constructive, or if you do communicate back to me in any way, whether that is positively or negatively, I will work with that communication accordingly in the present times and ongoing.

Remember that the situation I described is not ordinary. There are extensive merits involved and much that is extraordinary. Being that Harvard Law School is on the caliber level it is on, I would expect comprehension at this law school and for something of this magnitude to be taken on enthusiastically for the best of all involved. I will watch further and give the time until at least 30 days since I originally sent my follow-up letter. This means I am presently continuing to watch until September 21, 2025, which is 30 days since I emailed my follow-up letter to Harvard Law School.

Thank you,

Joseph Mallon

I sent the above message to deansoffice@law.harvard.edu and jdadmiss@law.harvard.edu after receiving the following message from Harvard Law School because this reply came from the area of one of the email addresses - gpquery@law.harvard.edu - and I still had two other email addresses that I sent my letters to recently.

Thank you for your email and for your interest in the S.J.D. Program at Harvard Law School.

Information on the S.J.D. Program (including information on eligibility, financing, and how to apply) may be found on our website at <http://hls.harvard.edu/dept/graduate-program/sjd-program>.

Detailed information on the structure of the S.J.D. program, including residency requirements, in the Graduate Program Handbook.

Please note, as our website states, students who have not received an LL.M. degree from Harvard or another leading U.S. law school are almost never admitted to S.J.D. candidacy. Students who have received an LL.M. degree from another leading U.S. law school are only rarely admitted directly to S.J.D. candidacy. Applicants interested in the S.J.D. program ordinarily must first apply to and successfully complete the Harvard Law School LL.M. program. Successful completion of the Harvard Law School LL.M. program does not, however, guarantee admission into the S.J.D. program.

We will not be able to respond to any further inquiries on this matter.

Kind regards,
